

Highlights of University Week include convocation, picnic, lecture

Gallaudet's 1989 University Week celebration, to be held Oct. 22-28, will culminate with a special convocation to honor Dr. Gilbert Delgado and Dr. Yerker Andersson for their outstanding work in the international deaf community. The two men will receive the Powrie V. Doctor medallion—the highest honor the University bestows for service to deaf people worldwide—on Oct. 27 in the Field House during a ceremony that begins at 10 a.m.

In keeping with the week's theme, "Windows on the World," Delgado, who is superintendent of the New Mexico School for the Deaf and spent 17 years at Gallaudet as a professor in the Department of Education, dean of the graduate school, and an international development officer for the International Center on Deafness, will share his perceptions of the quality of life for deaf people in Central and South America, and the Caribbean.

Andersson graduated from Gallaudet in 1960, has worked here for 25 years, and is a professor in the Department of Sociology and Social Work. He will also follow the University Week theme as he speaks about his work as president of the World Federation of the Deaf and his experiences in Europe during his recent sabbatical.

While this special convocation will close the week's formal activities and kick off the homecoming weekend, University Week will begin with one of many traditions established over its three-year history: Gallaudet students will sign the National Anthem at RFK Stadium for the Redskins-Tampa Bay game on Sunday, Oct. 22.

Another traditional event will occur on Monday, Oct. 23, when staff, faculty, and students gather on Olmsted Green for the University's annual community picnic from 3 to 7 p.m. The Gallaudet University Press will also hold its third annual book sale from 1 to 4 p.m. that day in the temporary building (T-9) located across from Olmsted Green. Both the picnic and the convocation are sponsored by the Office of the President.

Dr. William Marshall, Gallaudet's distinguished University faculty member for 1989-90, will begin a new tradition as he moderates a discussion among faculty, staff, students, and all attendees on "Excellence in Teaching" on Wednesday, Oct. 25, from 1:30 to 4 p.m. in the Ely Center Auditorium. In future University Weeks, the distinguished faculty member for the preceding year will be asked to make a presentation as Marshall is doing this year. The event is being sponsored by the School of Education and Human Services.

In honor of the University's 125th anniversary, the offices of the President and Alumni Relations are sponsoring a lecture series that will begin during University Week. Michael Finneran, Class of '72, superintendent of the Mississippi School for the Deaf, will speak about "Gallaudet's Agenda for the Future in Education" on Wednesday, Oct. 25, at 4:30 p.m. in Elstad Auditorium. A reception in "Ole Jim" will follow the program.

Three exhibits will be featured throughout the week. A time line of historical events entitled "A Brief History of Kendall School," will be on display in the KDES' first floor mall area daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in celebration of the 200th anniversary of Amos Kendall's birth. It is sponsored by Sharon Wood's middle school deaf studies class with contributions from other KDES departments. The Art Department will hold the "Art Students Exhibition 1988-1989" in the Washburn Arts Building from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

The Office of the President will exhibit the many international "Gifts to Gallaudet" that Deaf Way participants gave the University that eventful week. Campus community members can view the exhibit daily in the lobby outside the Visitors Center in the Edward Miner Gallaudet building.

The School of Education and Human Services will host the fall conference of the D.C. Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, "Professional Preparation: Making New Connections with the Community," on Wednesday, Oct. 27, in Fowler Hall. And the Department of Sociology and Social Work invites graduates of its bachelor's in social work program to renew old friendships and meet the students in Gallaudet's new master's of social work program at Kathy Whitney of Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc., provides training to the participants in the Management Institute's study of the use of FAX machines by deaf entrepreneurs. Toshiba recently gave the University 11 Facsimile 3700 machines.

Toshiba gives FAXes to Gallaudet; Management Institute to do study

Gallaudet has received 11 FAX machines from Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc., which will be used by the University's Management Institute to conduct a nine-month study of the uses and the effectiveness of the machines by deaf professionals in the business community.

"Toshiba's generosity and support will enable us to demonstrate that the range of communication options available to both deaf and hearing professionals is limitless," said Nancy Bloch, director of the Management Institute.

Seven of the model 3700 Facsimile machines, which have a retail price of about $2,000, were placed on loan two weeks ago with selected deaf managers and business owners in the local metropolitan area. Two of the machines are being used in the School of Management, one by the Development Office, and one by the Office of Public Relations.

A representative from Toshiba came to Kendall Green on Sept. 25 to lead a workshop for program participants on the uses of Facsimile 3700.

Toshiba donated the FAX machines to Gallaudet after reviewing a proposal for a FAX network among deaf professionals and entrepreneurs submitted by the Management Institute.

The proposal pointed to the fact that deaf people are "expanding their professional horizons toward leadership, management, and entrepreneurial opportunities . . . in spite of communication barriers and timely access to information, whether in verbal or in printed form. Deaf professionals are increasingly in need of a wide repertoire of options to surmount these barriers."

The proposal continued to say that the use of FAX equipment would be extremely beneficial to deaf and hard of hearing professionals because it would allow them "to function on a par with their hearing colleagues for increasingly rapid acquisition and sharing of information within and between departments [and] entire organizations."

Bloch added that in addition to the benefits that FAX machines can give to deaf professionals, FAXes, like TDDs, can further the goal of breaking down barriers between deaf and hearing people.

Announcements

The Volunteer Office has volunteers whose experiences and interests include working as a lifeguard, speaking several languages, working with young children and/or multiply handicapped deaf children, writing and editing, and working in drama, music, and dance. Because some requests for volunteers are difficult to fill, offices who are waiting for a volunteer are asked to be patient. If your office could use a volunteer with the above skills, call Cindi Olson, volunteer coordinator, at x5606.

Extension and Summer Programs and the Gallaudet Western Regional Center at Ohlone College in Fremont, Calif., will host "Educational Interpreting: Into the 1990s" Nov. 9-11 at the Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza—National Airport in Arlington, Va. This national conference will address professionally training, evaluating, and certifying educational interpreters; their code of ethics; policy issues for federal and state governments; research; and the report of the National Task Force on Educational Interpreting. Speakers will include Gallaudet President I. King Jordan; Dr. Judy Schrag, director, Office of Special Education Programs, U.S. Department of Education; Dr. Ursula Bellugi, director, Laboratory for Language and Cognitive Studies, Salk Institute for Biological Studies; Dr. Alan Hurwitz, National Task Force on Educational Interpreting; and Betty Bounds-Wood, director, Gallaudet Western Regional Center. Conference registration by Oct. 15 costs $115, and $150 thereafter. For more information, call Extension and Summer Programs at x5551.

The 150th anniversary of the pioneering form of modern photography, the daguerreotype, will be celebrated at Gallaudet this month with a juried photography show of works by select artists from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia. The exhibit, "Contrasts in Contemporary Photography," organized by The Friends of Daguerre of the American Sesquicentennial Committee, will include a reception Oct. 18 from 4-6 p.m. in College Hall. The exhibit will run through Oct. 27 from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. daily.

a reception on Oct. 27 from 4 to 6:30 p.m. in the West Office Building.

The Fred Schreiber Institute and the Development Office are sponsoring a $100-a-plate dinner to raise funds for the institute on Friday, Oct. 27, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. A ceremony to rename the Deafness Collection will follow the dinner along with a performance of "An Appointment with Fred," a play of anecdotes from Schreiber's life. Anyone who would like to attend the dinner can call Karen Cochran in the Development Office at x5410.

As always, University Week coincides with both Spirit Week and homecoming at Gallaudet. Activities sponsored by the Student Body Government include a pep rally and pre-homecoming party on Friday, Oct. 27, beginning at 7 p.m. in the Field House. Also on Friday, "Ole Jim" will hold its pre-game celebration with a cash bar and free chips and pretzels.

The homecoming parade will begin at MSSD at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 28, and proceed down West Virginia Avenue. Kickoff time for the game against Stevens State College is at 1:30 p.m. "Ole Jim" will host its annual after-the-game "Homecoming Bash" from 4 p.m. to 1 a.m. Admission is $5 and includes free hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar.

This year's homecoming ball will be held at the Pavilion at the Old Post Office from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. The dance will include hors d'oeuvres and drinks. To purchase tickets ($15 per person or $25 per couple), call x5390 or come by the SBG office between 3 and 5 p.m.

Other departments who are sponsoring University Week events include the Department of Educational Technology, the National Information Center on Deafness, the Career Center, Graduate Studies and Research, the College for Continuing Education, the School of Management's Management Institute, and the Office of Student Affairs.

"Everyone works really hard planning events for University Week; they all deserve a lot of credit," said Sheila Deane, board liaison and administrative assistant for the Office of the President, who is coordinating the week's events.

Deane expects to mail a complete calendar of events to all campus community members in early October.

Among Ourselves

Dr. Howard Egan, a professor in the Department of Mathematics and Computer Sciences, recently received an M.S. degree in computer science from Johns Hopkins University.

Gina Oliva, director of Gallaudet's Aerobics and Fitness Training Institute of the Deaf and the originator of "The Gallaudet Workout" and "Sign 'n Sweat," was awarded a trophy Sept. 23 in honor of her selection as one of the Top Ten Healthy American Fitness Leaders for 1989. The ceremony, held in Indianapolis, was co-sponsored by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, the U.S. Jaycees, and the Allstate Life Insurance Company.

Creative Ideas for Teaching Evaluation, a book edited by Dr. Donna Mertens, an associate professor in Gallaudet's Department of Educational Foundations and Research, was published recently by Kluwer Academic Publishers. The book includes articles written by Mertens and by Drs. Valerie Janesick and Terry Berkeley, both of the School of Education and Human Services.

The following Gallaudet faculty/staff members were recently named to the Board of Directors of the Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf (CAID) at a biennial convention held in San Diego: Lita Aldridge, family education coordinator for KDES, to serve a second term as treasurer; Dr. Barbara Bodner-Johnson, chairwoman of the Department of Education, secretary; and Albert Couthen, assistant principal of KDES, board member. Dr. Harvey Goodstein, a professor in the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, continues his four-year term on the CAID board, and University President I. King Jordan represents CAID as a member of the Joint Annals Committee.

Parent newsletter shares information

The gally-gram, a newsletter for the parents of Gallaudet students that is published by the Office of Enrollment Services, welcomes news that the campus community wants to convey to parents.

The newsletter, which contains light, informative articles, calendars of events, important dates such as registration, and often-used telephone numbers, was started last year to establish consistent contact with parents.

To date, four issues have been published, each highlighting a different unit on campus. This year's issues are slated to be sent to parents in October, December, April, and July.

Any department on campus that would like to use gally-gram to share a program or event with parents, inform students and their parents about new policies and procedures, or call attention to student achievements, can contact Taya Levine, HMB 161, x5629.
